LGBTQ is actually a psychological virus induced by shadow powers

(Don't let evil take control of you)

I have come to the conclusion that what some define as certain manifestations of the disease is nothing more than a psychological virus. It insinuates itself as a tendency of the vulnerable to lose themselves in the suffering of loneliness. While I recognize that nature makes mistakes, giving rise to both physical malformations and sexual inclinations considered unusual, the essential problem lies, in my view, in the intentional spread of this psychological virus. I believe that its purpose is to divert people from faith in God, in order to sow chaos in the world.

"Cut their roots, cover their sky, destroy their traditions, divide them, make them ashamed of who they are!

Thus, you will not have to fight to conquer them, because, frightened by what they will have become, they will beg you to come and save them from themselves." (Sun Tzu- The Art of War)

This virus acts subtly, through emotions, amplified by the multitude of pornographic films that flood the internet. The psychological trap exploits the deepest human desires: emotion and sex. We are beings who cannot stand loneliness, we are always looking for a partner. However, exposure to pornography exacerbates sexual desire and the need for companionship, creating a pressure that pushes us to make hasty and often wrong choices.

I have observed this phenomenon in various contexts. For example, in segregated dormitories, where girls live with girls and boys with boys, the lack of a partner of the opposite sex and loneliness can lead to same-sex attraction. Emotions and sexual desire increase exponentially when you have someone by your side, regardless of gender, as long as the person is young and of the same age. I find the same dynamic in men. In the case of monks, exposure to pornography and physical proximity, such as seeing each other in the showers or changing in the same room, can induce physical attraction. The same thing happens in prisons, or environments that favor same-sex interaction.

This pornographic syndrome amplifies the desire to find a partner, to have sex as often as possible and to change partners, including exploring relationships with people of the same sex. Surprisingly, the most vulnerable are often the rich, who, bored with excess and accessibility, seek new experiences. Equally exposed are the very studious and intelligent, whose emotional fragility, generated by accumulated stress, pushes them to quickly look for a partner. Last but not least, the poor are pushed by material needs to accept anyone.

Thus, I believe that the world is controlled through emotions and the massive spread of pornographic content of all kinds. Once this psychological virus, orchestrated by the "great shadow leaders," strikes a society, faith in God is lost, making people easily manipulated and subjugated.

Why Non-Traditional Sexual Orientations Are Not Valid

I believe that LGBTQ+ sexual orientation is not correct or valid. Looking at creation, I have noticed that Adam and Eve represented opposite sexes, and attraction and reproduction are based on different poles. Two men or two women cannot conceive children naturally. Furthermore, I believe that problematic unions can result in deformed children. The world cannot continue to exist if we were only gay or lesbian, because the species would no longer be able to reproduce, leading to extinction. A flower needs soil and water, not just water. Even living things that reproduce themselves need a different, suitable environment to reproduce. I have noticed how false theories, suggesting that God is gay or lesbian, or comparing him to beings that reproduce asexually, are spread specifically to induce confusion.

The Spiritual Antidote: Faith and Prayer

I believe that the only antidote to this psychological virus is deep faith. I have noticed that the spiritually strong resist better, whether they go to church or not, as long as they have learned to distinguish between good and evil from a young age. Prayer has the greatest impact. I myself went through this problem because of loneliness. Like any human being, I watched pornographic films, and stress and problems brought me close to falling into this trap. I felt an attraction to homosexuality, amplified by the lack of a partner and the invitations of gay friends.

How did I escape? I turned to prayer. For about two weeks, I prayed intensely , 20-30 times a day, constantly repeating, wherever I was: "God, keep me from harm, keep me from gays, make me like only women." But I really wanted to escape by any means, I felt a deep desire to free myself from this emotion that was taking me in an unwanted direction, and the prayer repeated with such intensity , even in my mind, helped me free myself and get rid of this virus. Even now, rarely, when I sometimes face the same problem, I repeat this with all my strength, asking God to protect me from negative influences. In a few days I escape, especially since I do not interact with gays and I do not frequent clubs.

Yes. The virus exists, but on a spiritual level, fueled by sexual desire induced by the increasing number of pornographic films. The only medicine and trump card remains prayer from the soul, that intensity with which you truly want to free yourself from this incipient "disease". It takes personal sacrifices to succeed.

My logic is that prayer has enormous power because it works on a mental and spiritual level. When you constantly tell yourself that you want to escape, you are creating a protective clause that prevents you from straying from your desired path.

Prayer works as a shield against evil, sending a message to the brain that prevents emotions from becoming chaotic. I believe that the mind has a greater power than emotions, and faith is closely linked to the ability not to give in to weaknesses. I am convinced that there is a self-protection mechanism in the brain, something subtle, chemical, at the level of atoms and cells, which is activated by prayer.

Don't let evil take control of you!

I invite you to reflect: am I right?
